Billion Dollar Kansas Flood Starts Receding

Guardsmen Patrol To Curb Fires

Downstream Cities Face Same Trouble

KANSAS CITY, July 16—Missouri National Guardsmen were called in today to patrol the fire and flood-ravaged streets of Kansas City as a billion-dollar disaster tide slowly drained down the Missouri river.

Many of the citizen-soldiers were in the flood-plagued city as volunteers before Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr. issued the official order for emergency duty.

Floodwaters of the Kaw and Missouri rivers ebbed from the fire-scorched, smoke-hung central industrial districts of Kansas City, Kas., and Kansas City, Mo., but the Missouri posed new threats to downstream cities on its path to the Mississippi.

A respite from the nation's worst flood was more of a promise than a reality for weary residents of Kansas and Missouri, where 23 already have perished.

THE KAW DROPPED to 34 feet—two feet below the crest—but the last flames from a four-day inferno of floating oil still licked across debris-clogged water among the burned remnants of petroleum bulk plants, lumberyards and 17 buildings in a seven-block area.

Guard units will prevent looting, direct traffic and perform other duties assigned by Kansas City, Mo., Mayor William Kemp. They will aid also in the round-the-clock job of sandbagging levees, a task that has continued ceaselessly since the floods first struck.

Along the Missouri—in West Alton, Festus, St. Mary's, St. Charles and Hermann, Mo.—sandbag crews worked feverishly as the flood crest rolled east. The Red Cross said some 16,500 persons already are affected.

And the mighty Mississippi began surging ominously toward the fourth highest level in its history, pushing into industrial plants on the St. Louis waterfront.

City officials in the still-paralyzed Kansas cities are mapping plans for a rehabilitation program to swing into action as soon as flood waters recede further.

Fire Chief Harvey Baldwin of Kansas City, Mo., said "conditions are the best in 24 hours" and added "we are waiting for the fire to burn itself out."

MORE THAN ONE million gallons of oil burned out of control for nearly eight hours yesterday and firemen finally checked the flames just before midnight.

Explosions rocked the area during the four-day fire which began Friday afternoon. The newest eruptions came as firemen believed for the ninth time that they had the conflagration under control. Twelve firefighters suffered minor injuries, but all remained on duty after receiving first aid.

Eleven storage tanks, holding 800,000 gallons of furnace oil, exploded during the height of the industrial section fire and sent showers of flames that threatened three more tanks containing 820,000 gallons of the fuel oil.

County Fair Chiefs Schedule Roundup Parley

With opening day for the 1951 Pickaway County Fair only two weeks away, directors of the agricultural show are making final arrangements.

A special meeting of the fair board is scheduled for 8 p. m. Tuesday in Fairgrounds Coliseum to "go over the entire picture," according to John Heiskell, fair manager.

A major item on the agenda will be the election of a new fair board treasurer to replace Harold Strous, popular Saltcreek Valley educator, who has been ordered by his physician to "give up all outside activities."

The county fair, scheduled to open Monday, July 30, with an unofficial free gate, will run through Friday, Aug. 3.

FLOODS HAVE CUT Kansas City's water supply from a normal 80-million gallons daily to half that amount. The liquid, precious in the midst of deluge, was supplied from trucks to residents who brought a wide assortment of containers to the seven stations set up for the purpose. Shown above are some of the residents who kept suppliers busy at a downtown "oasis." Rivers now are receding.

HOUSE DEBATING CONTROLS

Community Pricing Plan Being Planned By OPS

WASHINGTON, July 16—Price Stabilizers said today the government may impose individual dollars and cents price ceilings on each American community next Fall to hold the line on retail food prices.

The Office of Price Stabilization announced that the agency is seriously considering the method of community pricing used extensively during the last war.

To provide further information, OPS said a countrywide survey of food costs and prices will begin July 30, at 1,000 wholesale establishments.

Starting Aug. 2, OPS inspectors will start a similar study among some 3,000 retail grocers, both surveys are to be made every other week and may be stepped up if necessary.

OPS Director DiSalle said establishment of a uniform price ceiling on a food product might prove more satisfactory than the present method which is based on individual company operations.

FOR EXAMPLE, he said OPS would give each merchant a list of the ceiling prices on most of the national brands he sells in his store. The list would also apply to other grocers in the community.

Fresh meat and perishable food prices would not be affected by the plan, but officials said it would apply mainly to dry food products and canned goods.

Before community pricing can be started, however, DiSalle said relative price stability must be achieved on the products affected by the order. He said OPS investigators would try to determine how soon stability will be achieved.

Meanwhile, House leaders opened a drive today to complete new controls legislation this week as voting neared on important price and wage stabilization provisions.

Chairman Spence, (D) Ky., of the House Banking Committee, sponsor of the legislation drafted by his group, forecast longer daily sessions in an effort to speed up action.

Democratic leaders, including House Speaker Rayburn, (D) Tex., are becoming perturbed over the slow pace. A temporary 31-day extension was voted by Congress last month to keep controls from expiring June 30.

THE SENATE passed its controls measure June 29, but House and Senate conferees must have time in which to reconcile substantial differences in (Continued on Page Two)

Cowboy Inherits Mystery Thrill

When a hard-riding cowboy inherits a murder, action is a "must" result.

That situation exists in "Tonto Riley," a dynamic story of mysterious death in the Old West. Written by Lee E. Well, this story begins in serial form on Page Four of this issue of The Circleville Herald.

Scioto Yields Escapee's Body

CHILLICOTHE, July 16—The body of Gayle E. Young, 21, of Indianapolis was found along the Scioto river here today a short distance from the federal reformatory where he escaped two weeks ago.

The body, badly decomposed and identified through a tattooed Army serial number, was discovered by a Chillicothe fisherman at a point where police believe Young may have tried to swim across the river.

Young was sent to the reformatory from Minneapolis in April, 1950 to serve three years for transporting a stolen auto across state lines.

SUSPICION DISAPPEARING

Communists Warming Up To UN Aides In Kaesong

KAESONG, July 16—Kaesong was a strictly neutral city today as the Communist delegates and their aides gradually dropped their suspicious aloofness and warmed up to Allied personnel at the Korean truce talks.

An Allied motor convoy, including 20 newsmen, spotted only two armed Reds as it moved into the "armistice city" this morning under cloudy skies for the fourth day of the conference.

Even these two Communist soldiers had disappeared in the afternoon as the convoy prepared to return to the United Nations truce camp 15 miles to the southeast.

As the resumed negotiations went on inside a war-scarred but still stately Kaesong mansion, there were visible evidences that the Red high command was sincere when it accepted Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's demands that the conference area be demilitarized.

ALL UN PERSONNEL, including correspondents and news photographers, walked about 20 centuries-old Kaesong unhindered.

Vice Adm. Charles Turner Joy, chief UN delegate, seemed relieved. During a midday recess in the day's abbreviated meeting, the American admiral declared:

"It is much better, now that we are not surrounded by armed guards."

Indications were that the Communist and UN delegates were in accord, despite the fact that day's talks were adjourned more than two hours ahead of schedule.

The five North Korean and Chinese delegates willingly posed for Allied news photographers. Communist and Allied newsmen were far more amicable toward each other than when they first were allowed to enter Kaesong Sunday.

Upon leaving the conference house, the Red delegates were preparing to enter their Soviet-built jeeps when Allied news cameramen invited them to pose for pictures.

They returned to a patio on the American side of the building and stood in a group, posing.

A-Artillery Shunned; 8 Pounds Fuel To Drive Ship Round World

WASHINGTON, July 16—Defense weapons experts disclosed today that atom-powered ships and submarines are much closer to realization—and promise to be far more practical—than atomic artillery.

A survey of leading authorities including representatives of the Army shows that none has confidence in the early use of super-artillery, while all believe that an atomic-powered submarine will prove successful sometime next year.

The outlook for the future is for many atomic subs and surface ships, including aircraft carriers. At the same time, the question is growing bigger whether atomic explosions can ever be used for battlefield purposes.

This is despite the fact that atomic artillery is much easier while their jeeps circled out of the way so that the Allied delegates could leave.

Following the afternoon session, North Korean and Chinese newsmen suddenly opened up to the Allied correspondents. They smiled and tried to make conversation through a few interpreters.

SEVERAL RED news photographers examined cameras carried by American photographers.

On Sunday the Communist newsmen were almost entirely aloof from their Allied opposite numbers.

Monday, however, there were visible indications in Kaesong that the Communists really want a settlement that will end the war which has cost them more than a million casualties.

As the day wore on, the Americans in Kaesong broke down the barrier of Communist mistrust and suspicion.

Members of the staff of the UN delegation, including 20 newsmen, walked freely between "United Nations House" and the conference building and also through the ancient city of Kaesong.

The only armed Reds they encountered within the neutralized five-mile radius were obviously military policemen who, by agreement, were allowed to police the area but not to approach within a half mile of the conference building.

The area within a half-mile radius of the building was patrolled only by unarmed security guards.

Many of the Chinese and North Korean MPs smiled and bowed slightly to the Allied newsmen and other delegation personnel.

There were only a few scowls which came occasionally from uniformed North Koreans.

Children followed the correspondents and Allied officers around everywhere.

One Allied group, including Capt. John R. Dickson of Los Angeles, was followed by at least 200 children.

Occasionally some of the Korean youngsters were chided angrily by elders who tried to stop the tots from following the Allied officers and newsmen.

78 YEARS OLD, Mrs. Ralph Ingersoll wouldn't let age interfere when the eaves and trim of her home in Manitowoc, Wis., needed fixing up. She hauled out paint and ladder, went to work.

WEEKEND MISHAPS NOTED

4 Drunk Driving Cases Filed By Local Lawmen

Four men were held for Pickaway County grand jury action or accusations of drunken driving last weekend in Circleville courts.

Lawmen also were called to investigate four accidents in the county during the weekend.

Three of the men were arrested by Deputy James Diltz and had preliminary hearings in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root. The fourth man was arrested by Circleville Police Chief William McCrady and Officer Turner Ross and was arraigned in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller.

Everett Fowler of Lockbourne was held for grand jury action last week in Root's court on an accusation of drunken driving. The magistrate placed the man "on $100 cash bond or $200 property bond." Fowler was arrested on Route 23.

PETE GEARHEART, 46, of Greenup, Ky., was held on $200 bond in Root's court on an accusation of drunken driving. He was arrested by Diltz on Route 23.

Noel Johnson of Columbus also was held on $200 bond on a similar accusation in Root's court. Johnson was arrested by Diltz following a two-car accident at Routes 104 and 762. Rebecca May, 26, of Grove City, received a minor head injury in the accident.

Howard Graves, 57, of Chillicothe, was bound to the grand jury on $500 bond in Mayor Miller's court for allegedly driving while drunk. He was arrested on Route 23 south of Circleville.

All four men were expected to be heard in Pickaway County common pleas court later Monday on bills of information presented by Prosecutor Guy Cline.

The sheriff's department was summoned to investigate three accidents during the weekend, while the state highway patrol reported one mishap.

First of the crashes was at about 1:10 p. m. Saturday on Route 23 about three miles north of town.

Diltz said Bill Hall of Columbus was travelling north on the highway when he was confronted by an oncoming auto.

THE DEPUTY said Hall hit his brakes and lost control when the left front wheel brake locked. The Hall auto swerved left across the highway and into the ditch.

Mrs. Hall, a passenger in the auto, suffered a bruised hand and injured leg.

Second accident reported occurred at about 7 p. m. Saturday on Route 56, about three miles east of Circleville.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff said an auto operated by Everett Tatman, 19, of Laurelville, was (Continued on Page Two)

Weekend Mishaps Kill 19 Ohioans

COLUMBUS, July 16—Accidents claimed the lives of at least 19 Ohioans over the weekend.

Ten persons met death in traffic mishaps, four in drownings, three died in falls, and one man was crushed to death by falling sheets of steel.

Progress Is Made On Agenda

Cease-Fire Talks To Resume Tonight

KAESONG, July 17—(Tuesday)—Allied and Red delegates, meeting in what was officially termed a "more friendly" atmosphere cleared of armed men, approached closer Monday to agreement on the subject matter of the Korean truce conference.

An Allied communique on the fourth armistice meeting, which adjourned more than two hours earlier than scheduled, declared Monday night:

"The United Nations command delegation reports some progress was made in the formation of a mutually agreed upon agenda."

The announcement added that "the Communists have fulfilled the agreement with respect to the neutrality of the conference site in that no armed personnel were observed" in the Kaesong area.

The five-man UN delegation prepared meanwhile to return to the "armistice city" from the Allied truce camp for a fifth meeting slated to begin at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning (8 p. m. Monday EST).

AN ALLIED briefing officer at the camp, 15 miles southeast of Kaesong, told correspondents shortly before midnight Monday:

"Everyone was more friendly today than ever before."

The officer, Lt. Col. Howard S. Levie of New York, said the whole tone of the day's meeting, which was divided into a morning and an afternoon session, lent itself "more toward the formation" of an agenda.

Completion of a list of items the conference must discuss in order to end the bloody Korean war, now in its 56th week, would be "a major step forward," the official spokesman declared.

"Until you have an agenda," he pointed out, "you cannot start discussing substantive matters leading to a cease-fire."

Asked how long he thought it (Continued on Page Two)

Ground Action Decreases Along Korean Front

TOKYO, July 16—Heavy rains swept over the Korean war front today where ground action was reported decreasing, apparently keeping pace with the harmonious tenor of resumed cease-fire talks.

During the night, Allied light B-26 bombers blasted airfields in Red Korea and also hit a big Communist supply center. Piercing the heavy weather with radar, the bombers destroyed or damaged at least 60 enemy vehicles.

Ground action Sunday was marked by patrol skirmishes and the Eighth Army reported that enemy resistance was light.

Some Allied officers expressed the belief to frontline correspondents that the Communists are prepared to launch a 72-division attack if the cease-fire negotiations break down completely. Normally a Red division in Korea is estimated at between 8,000 and 10,000 soldiers. This potential attacking force therefore would total as many as 720,000 men.

Officers pointed that indications of a Red buildup have been noted on the East Korean coast.

Red-held east coast ports were pounded by Allied warships and carrier-borne planes Sunday. The warships plastered Red targets with more than 500 rounds of high explosives.

Progress Is Made On Agenda

would take to agree on the agenda, Levee replied:

"It would be pure guesswork if I said 24 hours or 24 days."

The briefing officer, who attended Monday's Kaesong talks, said:

"The Chinese smiled when they came back into the conference room and they nodded to (Airforce) Maj. Gen. L. C. Craigie (one of the UN delegates.) Maybe the Communists have learned that we are not the amateurs they had been led by their propagandists to believe we were."

THE UN COMMUNIQUE

Monday night was the first official Allied announcement since the historic conference began exactly a week ago to state directly that definite progress had been made on the important agenda question.

It recalled that "all procedural matters" had been "agreed upon" previously, following resumption Sunday of the ceasefire talks which had been broken off last Thursday.

In Monday's two-part meeting, the communique said, "only agenda items were open for discussion."

The day's morning session, the official statement added, was opened by Vice Adm. Charles Turner Joy, head of the five-man UN delegation, who presented "further argument in favor of the items on the agenda proposed by the UN command."

The American admiral "spent the best part of the morning" advocating the Allied-proposed agenda. Then the chief Red delegate, North Korean Gen. Nam Il, "requested a two-hour recess to enable him to discuss these views with his delegation."

During the afternoon session, Nam Il "presented the reaction of his delegation to the views of the UN command," the communique related.

The communique took note of the fact that the Allied delegates "posed for UN photographers" during Monday's two-hour recess, while "the Chinese-North Korean delegation posed" for the Allied cameramen after the day's talks were adjourned.

Allied and Red newsmen were described as "far more amicable" toward each other than they were Sunday when they first met on Kaesong's streets.

1948 Marriage Nearing End

A petition for divorce has been filed in Pickaway County common pleas court by Barbara Alice Schwalbach against Harold William Schwalbach.

The couple was married Nov. 27, 1948, in Greenup, Ky. They have two children. The wife accuses the husband of gross neglect of duty. She asks for the divorce, custody of the children and alimony.

the two bills and draft a completed measure.

The compromise must then be acted upon by both houses before being sent to President Truman.

Meanwhile, administration supporters braced themselves for new defeats as the House reached the section of the 84-page bill which covers price and wage controls.

With the farm bloc, composed largely of Republicans and Southern Democrats, in firm control of the situation, every indication is that the House will take the following action in the next few days:

1. Ban further price rollbacks on food, including the two 4.5 percent beef price roll backs slated to become effective in August and October.

2. Eliminate the 10 percent price rollback on livestock which went into effect May 19. The three rollbacks were designed to save consumers $700 million a year on beef.

3. Revamp the Wage Stabilization Board by increasing its public membership, adding an independent union representative, and removing the board's power to mediate non-wage disputes. The CIO says the amendments, sponsored by Rep. Lucas, (D) Tex., will make the board "useless."

4. Strike out the administration-requested authority to fix farm parity prices at the beginning of a commodity marketing year or season. They are now computed monthly.

explosion is used. Military experts said that an allowance for usual artillery inaccuracy would be unthinkable.

Usual air bombing inaccuracy is also unthinkable—the Airforce thinks it may need fleets of reconnaissance, spotter and escort planes for every atomic bomber—but does not figure to the same extent where the targets are larger.

THE U.S. IS NOW believed to be in a position to drop at least ten atomic bombs on each of Russia's seventh industrial centers of more than 100,000 population, but the Airforce is far from thinking the bomb stockpile is too large.

The air experts pointed out that, in terms of delivery, 700 bombs is not a large number. Defense leaders said the absolute effectiveness of the strategic arm can never be made too certain. The H-bomb does not change the picture, because atomic fuel is consumed in its manufacture.

For these reasons, the atomic artillery program is being continued only on a "perhaps" basis, while the sea-going phases of the atom are being pushed full speed ahead.

attempting to pass another auto when he was confronted by an approaching car.

Tatman told the sheriff his brakes "grabbed" when he jammed them on, throwing his auto out of control. The Tatman auto swerved to the left side of the road, overturned and went into a farm fence, the sheriff said.

Tatman suffered scratches in the crash, Radcliff added.

Another accident was reported at about 8:15 p. m. Saturday on Route 23 near the Pickaway-Franklin county line.

Diltz said Merle Partain, 24, of Lockbourne Airbase was travelling north when he was confronted by slow-moving traffic in his lane.

Partain said he jammed his brakes and skidded to the left to avoid a collision with the slower-traffic. The auto overturned and rolled down an embankment for about 25 feet before coming to a halt in a field.

DILTZ SAID the driver suffered a bruised shoulder and shock.

Last of the mishaps reported occurred at about 7 p. m. Sunday on the John Keller curve, Route 104, just north of Route 316.

State Highway Patrolman S. J. Hobar said a tractor-trailer outfit operated north by Clyde Spriggs of Jackson was rounding the curve when a side broke out of the trailer, spilling a load of sewer pipe over the road.

The pipe damaged the bridge in the curve, the guard railing and a farm fence. Traffic was tied up until state highway department workmen cleared the debris.

Container Aide Files Petition For Council Seat

A petition seeking election on the independent ticket as Circleville councilman-at-large has been filed in Pickaway County board of elections office by John F. O'Brien.

Earlier O'Brien took out a petition to run on the same ticket for councilman from the Third Ward, but apparently changed his mind.

Bid are now in for all three councilman-at-large positions. Democrats Joe Brink and Walden Reichelderfer won party nominations for two of the jobs during the May primaries. Both are incumbents.

Councilman-at-large Ray Anderson did not file for the position during the primaries, has since given notice of his intention to resign from council.

Unless other independents file by the Aug. 8 deadline, Brink, Reichelderfer and O'Brien face no opposition for the three councilman-at-large positions. All will be elected. O'Brien is associated with Container Corp. of America.

Also filed in the board of elections office was a petition by Harry Lane, seeking reelection as Circleville Township trustee.

Lockbourne Air Recruits Sought

Initial enlistments into the United States Airforce will be accepted at Lockbourne Airforce Base until the end of July, according to Col. George W. Humbrecht, base commander.

Men who have received their pre-induction physical examinations are also eligible under this temporary ruling. This applies to those men who have not yet received induction notice from their draft boards.

Prior to this, the Lockbourne recruiting office has been available only to those men who had previous military service.

Hit-Skip Case Being Probed

Circleville police Monday were seeking the driver of an auto which damaged a parked car on Scioto street late Saturday.

Policeman John White said an auto, owned by Harold Paxton, 23, of Laurelville Route 2, was parked on South Scioto street Saturday when another auto backed into it, then was driven away without awaiting investigation.

The police said they have the license number of the other auto, apparently owned by an out-of-county person.

CONGRESS IGNORES BILL

June Proves To Be Boom Month For House-Building

WASHINGTON, July 16—Builders started a whopping 130,000 housing units into construction in June, the biggest monthly total since September and close to the highest production level the industry has ever achieved.

Yet, leading builders are unhappy: first, because 32 percent of the new work in June involved public housing projects; second, because Congress has still to pass a workable, realistic defense housing bill.

Moreover, the June report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics raises the possibility that the Federal Reserve Board may tighten real estate credit controls despite pressure for relaxation.

Reserve Board officials have repeatedly said controls would be toughened or eased depending on whether the industry exceeds or under-produces the 850,000 housing unit goal set for this year by the government.

In the first six months of 1950, a total of 574,500 units were started, leaving only 275,500 units for builders to start in the next six months.

DRASTIC CUTBACKS in home building, therefore, are in the offing and officials say the board may adjust the controls formula for buyers to make sure that the target figure is achieved.

Public Housing Authorities throughout the country rushed an estimated 42,300 units into construction last month, about ten times as many as were begun in any previous month.

Officials explain that fear of congressional action restricting PHA activity during the next 12 months persuaded many communities to start work on projects ready for construction.

The National Association of Home Builders says "this is an indication of a very dangerous trend" since PHA took work away from private builders. NAHB renewed a demand for postponement of public housing for the duration of the national emergency.

Another problem worrying the government and the industry is the delay in Congress on defense housing legislation. Modern a t e action has been taken by government agencies to speedup the program but further authority is needed.

William Levitt, the New York builder, warns the country may soon find its defense program crippled by the lack of housing and community services required around new atomic energy plants and steel mills.

HE WANTS Congress to provide easy financing to builders for construction of permanent communities, including homes costing less than $10,000 with "little or no down payment" from defense workers. Levitt says the present system of moderately relaxing credit controls in critical defense areas will eventually fall short of meeting the tremendous housing demand for migrant defense workers and military personnel. The National Production Authority is reshuffling controls on construction again. This time home builders and contractors doing small jobs are expected to get a better break on scarce materials.

STILL ON THE MAKE

NOT without some reason, Paris considers itself the center of the universe, this inverse parochialism being a French state of mind that both baffles and charms outsiders. So when Paris proclaims that it is 2,000 years old in 1951, who is there to argue? No one knows how old Paris is.

When the English, in quest of tourist dollars and in a spirit of national reassurance, proclaimed the Festival of Britain for 1951, the French were quick to come up with a parallel attraction. The Parisian strivings of two millennia were climaxed in the presence of the mayor of Moscow at an official banquet, which could be retrogression instead of progress.

Anyway, bands paraded in front of Napoleon's tomb—whose stay in Moscow was brief—including strange phenomena like Americans, Highlanders in kilts and bearded Moroccans.

There were folk dancing, fireworks and champagne, with the amiable President Auriol smiling on one and all. And if Moscow's chief magistrate with a straight face commended Paris for upholding the tradition of freedom, the land that bred Voltaire and Anatole France knows how to smile.

Given a sufficient "take" in American dollars, Swiss francs and other valuable foreign exchange, Paris can rest content in being 2,000 years old, or about the age of Mistinguette.

These Days

The United Nations gradually, through its various committees, is moving into world government, and the country that it uses as its testing ground is the United States. Few Americans are conscious of this activity of the United Nations and many of those who know what is being done by the various committees refuse to believe that any of it can have any permanent effect on American institutions.

Yet under the charter of the United Nations, which in the American political system is a treaty signed by the President and ratified by the Senate, decisions of the United Nations have already been applied to cases in our courts with the full weight of the law.

One of the committees of the United Nations which has concerned itself with questions tremendously important to the United States is the Special Committee on the Draft Convention on Freedom of Information. As the work of this committee is studied, it is clear that its interest is not in freedom of information but in the right of governments to limit and suppress information and for the harassment of reporters. This is done under the aesopian word, "responsibility."

Carroll Binder, of the Minneapolis Tribune, the American representative on this committee has been waging a losing fight trying to educate some of the Europeans about freedom of the press, as practiced in the United States, where the imperfections of man are recognized and often assumed to be natural and therefore unpunishable.

In those other countries, the theory is that the "great mind" alone can determine what the people ought to know and that competent reporters, who check their data, are spies or irresponsible. Binder describes their attitude:

"These governments are engaged in a terrifying experiment to condition the minds of hundreds of millions of persons in an attempt to make them respond automatically to the commands of their rulers. In their hands information has been transformed from a means of enlightenment and understanding into a political weapon taking any form or shape required by the situation. It has become a knife to assassinate."

Try, Stop Me

A stoutish lady cornered Toscanini at a reception and cooed, "Maestro, can you ever forget that night in Milan when I sat next to you and they served that wonderful macaroni pie?" The maestro answered coldly, "Your face escapes me completely, but I distinctly recall the macaroni."

When the Mobile and Southern Railroad explained to Deacon Smedley that a proposed cut-off would run right through the spot where his barn stood, and offered him ten times the worth of the property for his consent, Smedley astounded everybody, his wife in particular, by turning a deaf ear to the proposal. He defended his stand to his outraged wife by shouting, "Dang it, do ye think I'm goin' to keep running out to that barn day and night to open and shut the door every time they want to run a train through?"

ONE MAN'S OPINION

At the moment, General Eisenhower doesn't seem to have as many offers of assistance from the republics of Europe as from the Republicans of America.

We don't know that Ike is willing to run for President, but some Republicans figure that an active general ought to be able to take a retired captain without firing a shot.

Democrat plans are uncertain except that they are thinking of holding their convention in the Chicago stockyards. That way a little meat might get into the picture.

And there's nothing appeals to the voter like a little meat or a picture thereof. Unless he happens to be a vegetarian in which case he votes the straight vote.

Godfrey is over visiting Eisenhower contributing more dough to it than he is taking out of it.

The last report we saw every citizen except Godfrey had a $600 piece of the national debt. The government owed him the President's yacht and four B-29s.

We'll vote for anybody who will make him secretary of the treasury with power to take over our tax liabilities.

CHAPTER ONE

AVRILLO appeared ahead, a scattering of yellow lights in the night, as mysterious as the cryptic note that had brought him northward from below the border. The bay's ears cricked forward, sensing food and rest after the dusty miles that had been covered during the long, hot day. The rider moved his hand across his face with a slow and weary gesture, felt the rasping stubble on his jaw. A slight pressure of his knees started the bay forward again.

Nor did Avrillo lose its air of mystery as he came into the town. Low and squat buildings, silent and slightly foreboding, appeared out of the darkness. Only the central portion of the town seemed to be alive, where lamplight threw yellow bars across the dusty road.

The bay moved into the light and, for an instant, the rider loomed tall in the saddle, and then melted into darkness again.

He saw that there was a light in the General Store, and it streamed from the high-pitched saloon just beyond. Two saddled horses stood with drooping heads at the store's hitchrack. A lantern burned over the wide doors of the livery stable. He turned in at the stable and stiffly dismounted.

The hostler appeared as the man led the bay through the doors. The hostler picked his broad teeth with a wood splinter, dull eyes missing none of the bay's fine points, the saddle with the Mexican conchas, the tall, rangy man whom he judged to be in his late twenties.

"Stall and feed," the stranger said, and his voice had a soft slur. "Till off-saddle and rub him down."

The hostler wheeled and led the way to an empty stall. The stranger unsaddled while the hostler forked hay into the feed trough with a few ears of corn.

"You'll be here long?"

"Don't rightly know how long," the stranger replied. "Maybe a day—maybe a week. Quien sabe?"

"Sure, who knows?" the hostler repeated and lost further interest.

The stranger picked up his bedroll and left the livery stable. He mounted the steps to the hotel porch and entered the lobby. It was a long and narrow room with a short counter to one side, its base badly scarred. To the left, a narrow stairway led to the upper floor. The stranger tapped a bell on the counter and dropped his bedroll to his feet. He turned the heavy register around, blew dust from the page, and signed his name with a spluttering pen.

A door opened behind the counter and a man came out. He wore a soiled, white shirt and a black string tie. A high, bald dome caught the light from the hanging lamp and his eyes were badly squinted. The stranger speared the pen back in the ink-stained potato, one corner of his lips lifting in a tired ghost of a grin.

"Make it a good bed, amigo. It's been a long, long time."

The clerk moved the ledger around, squinted at the bold, blocky writing.

"Tonto Riley—from Sonora," he said. "That's a long way off."

Tonto nodded briefly and waited until the clerk turned and lifted a key from the board. He circled the counter and shuffled toward the stairway. Tonto, looking slightly surprised, picked up his bedroll and followed the man.

A lamp burned low in the upper hall. The clerk moved down the hall, stopped and unlocked a door. He struck a match and advanced into the room, lighting the lamp, then he turned and hooked his thumbs in his wide suspenders.

"I'm Al Hibbs, Tonto. You'll be seeing a lot of me."

"Will it?" Tonto said, and Al squinted up at him. The clerk pointed to the iron bed in the corner whose white enamel had flaked like an ancient eggshell.

"It ain't the most comfortable in the Grand Hotel," he said and looked around the room, eyes narrowed to slits. "But this is the safest place we've got. Buenas noches."

He backed out and closed the door. Tonto faced the window as he undressed.

So this is Avrillo, he thought, and there wasn't much to it. He had seen a hundred towns like this in his wanderings from his old home in Arizona. They were all alike; sun-blasted, ugly concentrations of the life and business of the far-flung ranges. He had not been able to see much of Avrillo, but Tonto knew the type. Only the Mexican pueblos below the border achieved a slight change in the monotonous pattern of the cow towns.

But there was something here in Avrillo that needed explaining. The puzzle lay in a brief and cryptic letter Tonto had received slightly less than a month ago. It had been addressed to the old home, a ranch that had been sold to and absorbed by a big syndicate five years ago.

The envelope had been soiled, made almost illegible by postmarks and scrawled forwarding addresses. It had cataloged his life for the last five years—the home ranch that he had operated on a shoe-string after his father's death; wiped out by a drop in beef price; the postmarks of little towns scattered all over Arizona. He had wandered from ranch to ranch, working at each place until an inward restlessness had sent him wandering on. Then, finally, the letter had reached him deep in Sonora and just in time. Tonto had not found Mexico to his liking and he was ready to drift back north when the letter came.

Tonto had read the brief message, scanned the check drawn in his favor. He studied the signature and racked his memory for Owen Bradley. It didn't come, nor did he have any recollection of the name, nor had he heard of Avrillo in New Mexico. Yet the check was substantial enough, once he reached an American bank. He reread the note.

"It will be very much to your interest to come to Avrillo as quickly as possible. Please report to me at your earliest convenience with suitable proof of identification. The enclosed check will be sufficient to cover all expenses and is drawn to your favor. I can assure you the matter is of the utmost importance to you."

Tonto—born George—Riley had carefully studied the letter. He had folded it into his pocket and several times in the next two or three days took it out to read and study. It remained as cryptic as ever, nor could he find any connection in his past with Owen Bradley or the town of Avrillo, New Mexico.

At first he had a strong suspicion that this might be some sort of practical joke, but joke or not, Tonto had saddled his bay and started northward. When he reached Bisbee, he presented the check to the bank and gave satisfactory proof that he was George Riley. He was told he would have to wait until the Avrillo bank was reached by telegraph and a confirmation returned, a matter of several hours.

Tonto was so certain that the whole thing would prove to be a hoax that he nearly rode out of Bisbee without waiting for the denial that was sure to come from Avrillo. But he had just placed two hundred hot and dusty miles behind him and Bisbee looked to be a good place to rest for a day or two.

He did not appear at the bank until the next morning and then somewhat hesitantly. The cashier's face lighted when he saw Tonto and he had the crisp, green and yellow bills waiting. Tonto stared at the money in honest astonishment. He turned on his heel and hurried out to his horse. Half an hour later Bisbee was behind him and he rode toward New Mexico.

So he had arrived at this little box of a room in the Grand Hotel of Avrillo. Tonto shrugged and pulled on his shirt. He picked up his hat, beat the dust from it, then blew out the lamp.

Pale Bridal Pink Color

Scheme Marks Woodward-Strawser Ceremony

Couple On Wedding Trip To Niagara

Pale bridal pink was the predominating color in the wedding scene on Sunday at 4:30 p. m. for the wedding of Miss Mary Ann Woodward and Edward William Strawser Jr., in First Evangelical United Brethren church.

The Rev. Carl L. Wilson was the officiating minister at the service which was read before a background of pink carnations, pink gladioli arranged with palms and fern and lighted with two matching candelabra.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Woodward of Mingo street and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Strawser of East Ohio street. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore pink nylon tulle over satin fashioned with a crushed bertha caught with satin roses. The formal gown also featured a high neckline and long fitted sleeves closed by many tiny buttons. The bouffant skirt swept into a very long cathedral train.

In a deeper tone the imported silk illusion veil fell from a bonnet of small rolled leaves centered with a pearl. Her jewelry was a pink pearl necklace with matching earrings and her bridal bouquet was of pink roses centered with a purple-throated white orchid.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Donald E. Woodward, sister-in-law of the bride, and bridesmaid, Miss Nancy Boggs, were gown in ballerina length dresses fashioned with many layers of sunset pink tulle over net and taffeta. The sheered bodices were made with portrait necklines and small sleeves. Their flowers were pink carnations tied with pink satin ribbon.

The flower girl, little Miss Karen Lanman, cousin of the bride, was wearing a white frock over a pink slip. The neckline of her dress was outlined with tiny rose buds.

Donald E. Woodward, brother of the bride, was best man and guests were seated by Leon Sims, William Weller, and John Fissel, all of Circleville, and Robert Smith of Columbus.

Christian service center was decorated with baskets of pink carnations and gladioli for the reception. The bridal table was centered with an arrangement of pink snapdragons.

Mrs. Woodward chose a pink lace dress over a blue slip for her daughters wedding. She also wore a natural straw hat and her flowers were shattered carnations.

The bridegroom's mother was attired in a navy blue costume with white accessories and her flowers were also shattered carnations.

For her wedding trip to Niagara Falls and other Eastern points, the new Mrs. Strawser changed to a medium green gabardine suit with brown and white accessories. She was wearing the orchid from the bridal bouquet.

The former Miss Woodward was graduated by Circleville high school and is employed by General Electric Co. The bridegroom also a graduate of Circleville high school and is an employee of Picway power plant. On their return the couple will reside at 525 East Franklin street.

Columbus Slated For OPS Test

'Community Pricing' Program Detailed

COLUMBUS, July 16—Columbus has been selected as one of the cities to be checked in a survey to determine if "community pricing" would be practical in the whole nation, according to Clyde C. McBee, local OPS price executive.

McBee said that "to lay the basis for a program of posted dollars and cents 'community prices' in the nation's grocery stores the Office of Price Stabilization will begin a survey of wholesale and retail grocery costs and prices."

"During the course of the survey teams from OPS offices will visit a large number of these firms to determine what grocers pay for foods and what they sell them for."

McBee revealed that he and Earl G. Fellows, chief of the food branch in the Columbus office would confer with Washington officials about the survey to-day.

"Community pricing," McBee explained, "is a system, familiar in World War II days, under which the country is divided into relatively small market areas, and grocery price ceilings are established for each area on the basis of location, transportation and other cost factors."

"THESE CEILINGS, which are the same in an area for all stores of the same class, are then printed on charts for posting in retail stores where customers can see them."

"The community price pro-

Communists Ban Salvation Army

HONG KONG, July 16 — The Peiping radio announced today that the Salvation Army has been banned in Tientsin, the largest port in Northern China, because it is a "reactionary organization directed by imperialists."

The announced action against the international religious and philanthropic organization which at one time had 450 branch centers in the Far East, is part of the Communist propaganda campaign against all things Western.

"That program made available exact dollar and cents ceilings both to consumers and food retailers in the form of price lists which each retailer was required to post."

"The program had a lot to do in holding the line on wholesale and retail food prices from the time it was started May, 1943, to the end of the price control program," the official concluded.

Broadway Agog After Star's Suicide Try

NEW YORK, July 16 — Ash-blond Joyce Mathews, who twice married and twice divorced Milton Berle, the television star, wasn't telling today why she attempted suicide yesterday while in the luxurious penthouse apartment of Showman Billy Rose. But Broadway thought it had the answer.

Said the 31-year-old showgirl from her bed in Roosevelt hospital:

"There is no romantic tie-up between Billy Rose and myself. Nothing romantic at all."

But most agreed with Walter Winchell who commented:

"This only confirms what Broadway already knew." He referred to rumors that Rose and his wife, Eleanor Holm, had reportedly had a falling-out over his interest in Miss Mathews.

Miss Mathews' manager, who arrived after police had broken down a locked bathroom door to reach her, said that she had become hysterical over gossip arising from a plane trip she made to Montreal last week with Rose. The manager, Saul Richmond, said the trip was a business one.

The hospital authorities said that Miss Mathews' condition was "fairly good." She may be required to stay in the hospital for several days, however. She had slashed both of her wrists with a razor blade.

Vitally-Needed Supplies Are Promised Farms

WASHINGTON, July 16—Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson has promised strong efforts to provide farmers with vitally-needed supplies of machinery, fertilizer, equipment and other materials.

In a letter to Agriculture Secretary Brannan, Wilson stressed the importance of farm production in the nation's mobilization program.

He said an agricultural program geared to increasing commodities for defense, and providing an adequate diet for civilian and military use is a basic element in the nation's strength.

The defense mobilizer pointed out, however, that requirements for production, processing and distribution of food, must be balanced with other demands upon scarce materials so that the maximum use can be made when materials are allocated. He said that policy has already given farm machinery manufacturers priority assistance in securing their third-quarter requirements of scarce materials.

AFTER KOREA. WHAT?

Nation Faces Big Problem Keeping Commies Curbed

WASHINGTON, July 16 — America's top leaders today emphasize the vital necessity of continuing to rearm the United States and its friendly allies against the threat of Communist aggression even if an armistice ends the fighting in Korea.

Authorities point out that Red Russia is the real enemy of peace—not Communist China or North Korea—and that any relaxation of our defense program would be suicidal.

A cease-fire order in Korea will bring casualties to an end in that Far Eastern land but will have little effect on the course charted for building up America's defenses on a global basis.

America's ranking military chiefs are determined to make U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force strong enough to withstand successfully any blows of Communist aggression, by surprise or otherwise. This means there will be no letup in the existing program for turning young American citizens into fighting men and giving them adequate modern weapons.

THERE ARE SOME hard bits of this determination. One was the recent increase of draft service from 21 to 24 months. A second was the presidential extension of all enlistments for one extra year. A third is the increase of draft quotas for August and September. A fourth is an expected callup of two or three more National Guard divisions in the fall.

There are a few bright spots for the parents and relatives of men in America's armed services. Foremost is that a Korean armistice will end the killing and maiming of American youth, whose casualties are now reaching a grand total of around 80,000 dead, wounded or missing.

Another cheerful outlook is the fact that the armed forces will begin releasing inactive reserves, starting in August. Their places will be filled by draftees. This accounts for the fact that the Marines will share in draftees for the first time in the August call.

When the fighting ends in Korea there is hope that frontline veterans will be brought home in due time for a rest period under the rotation system already started. Their divisions will remain in the Far East, though probably getting rest periods in Japan if the armistice proves a success.

America's military chieftains also hope that a Korean armistice will be followed by an increase of other Allied troops in the United Nations' armies, so the ratio of American troops may be reduced and some more U.S. veterans brought home.

THE CURRENT armistice negotiations deal only with military questions. The larger questions of Korean government in the future and territorial lines will have to be settled at a political level. Such questions may not be settled for a year or two.

The nation's leaders are daily urging the American people to give their full support in rearmament "after Korea."

General Joseph Collins, Army chief, says: "The fact that we have had some success in meeting the Communist threat during the past several years is a compelling reason why we must not relax now.

"We should drive resolutely along our planned route toward world peace and not be diverted by any detours of Communist policy. Ours is a long-range program of security through strength and we ought not deviate from it because of short range successes."

Admiral Forrest Sherman, Navy chief, says:

"The greatest gain for Russia and the greatest threat to the United Nations is to use the Korean armistice as a way to slow down United States rearmament."

Senator Connally, foreign relations chairman, says:

"I favor continuing to build up our defenses regardless of what happens in Korea."

The approximate strength of the armed forces is around 3,300,000 men today. The goal is to have 3,598,000 under arms by next June 30. This means an increase of 298,000 men plus replacements for all men released. A bill, already passed by the Senate, is pending in the House to enlarge the Marine Corps from two and one-third divisions to four divisions. This would increase its manpower to a minimum of 330,000 and a maximum of 400,000. Its passage by the house seems assured.

To make his field ration the best quality in the world...

The combat soldier must have food that is nourishing, unspoiled and easy to eat. The Army also wants it compact and full of concentrated energy. Both expect it to be packaged so it will reach the soldier in the front lines without breakage. Natural gas is a vital link in the fulfillment of these requirements. Gas is essential for processing food for the Armed Forces, and for dehydrating and concentrating combat rations. It is also used in making special food containers which defy spoilage and rough handling.

calls for strange dinner hours in your county

In View Of The News

By J. C. Oestreicher
INS Foreign Director

World capitals took a carefully-measured view today of the draft of a peace treaty designed to end the war with Japan that began with Pearl Harbor.

Initial indications are that considerable negotiation still must take place at the San Francisco conference scheduled for September before the blueprint is accepted in entirety.

The feeling in major world centers is that President Truman's adviser John Foster Dulles dealt with an abnormally difficult subject in a highly constructive manner.

But reservations have been imposed with regard to some of the conclusions reached by President Truman's Republican assistant.

These cover a wide range—from sentimental and psychological to economic and military.

ONE OF THE first objections to the so-called "soft peace" for Japan came from Australia, which next to the United States feels the impact of Korean hostilities and difficult truce negotiations most severely.

The foreign office—known in Canberra as the ministry for external affairs—took occasion to remind the world that Japanese aggression is still a sore and costly memory.

But at the same time, Australia conceded that Japan cannot remain indefinitely a subsidized appendage of the Western World, nor can it be left entirely devoid of national defense.

The Australian misgivings have received compensation to some extent in agreement among that country, the United States and New Zealand to lay the framework of a Pacific Defense Pact.

This has been the ambition of most leading Australian statesmen ever since the North Atlantic Defense Organization came into being.

They have rejected arguments that over-long lines of defense and potential attack render such an agreement impossible. They have pointed to the speed of present-day planes, the scope of modern battleships and aircraft carriers, and the almost indefinite under-water stamina of current submarines to prove their point.

Yet the Australians concede that in defense of the Pacific, the Japanese home islands must necessarily be a pivotal point and cannot conceivably be left in the category of what was known as the "soft under-belly" of Europe in World War II.

THE IMPORTANT thing, obviously, will be to reconcile Australia's known defense needs with the extent to which Japan will be allowed to re-arm and the guarantees which can be provided against any possible new aggression.

Many of the highest international authorities are entirely convinced that Japan's imperialistic intentions have been curbed forever.

As of the moment, however, Australia is obviously not quite so sure.

So far as Great Britain is concerned, the government of Prime Minister Attlee has agreed without reservation to what has been termed a "treaty of reconciliation" to preserve Japan as a bulwark against Communism.

But a sampling of press comment in London indicates that the proposed Dulles arrangement is looked upon as something of a calculated risk.

The conservative London Daily Telegraph said:

"The treaty is a gamble on Japanese good behavior and an experiment in peace by conciliation. In both respects its terms have been largely influenced by the difficulties of the international situation."

But the liberal Manchester Guardian, prone at all times to lodge possibly embarrassing questions, took occasion to ask:

"What would happen if Japan used the friendship of the West to build up its strength and then switched alliances?"

In general, however, the world is welcoming an end to the state of war with Japan, as it has done in the case of Germany and as the United Nations are striving to do in still-localized Korea.

The scheduled San Francisco conference on the proposed Japanese treaty may go far, very far indeed, in a war-torn world if the truce negotiations in Kaesong emerge in a satisfactory settlement.

Stalin's Daughter Gets Lush Fete

LONDON, July 16 — Prime Minister Stalin's favorite daughter, Svetlana, was reported today to be on a honeymoon trip through Eastern Europe after a second marriage that touched off a celebration unrivaled since the days of the czar.

The London Sunday Express reported in a dispatch from Stockholm that the 27-year-old daughter of the Soviet dictator was married to Mikhail Kaganovich, the son of Lazar Kaganovich, a commissar for industry and a member of the all-powerful Politburo.

The dispatch, which merely quoted what it called reports from Iron Curtain newspapers, said that the fabulous wedding cost $280,000 and the feast that followed it lasted for two weeks.

These Days

"This convention was never, as I understand it, intended to deal primarily or even directly with the work of journalists. I have understood its intent to be the promotion and protection of everyone's right to freedom of information. To distort it into a punitive measure directed at journalists would certainly be a mockery of everything the United Nations has attempted to do in this field. We must realize that undesirable checks placed on journalists would apply equally to artists and teachers, to lawyers and politicians—and in the last analysis to people like ourselves drawn from every walk of life. Even if the grievances against some journalists and newspapers are assumed to be real, this is certainly too high a price to pay to settle a few scores!"

The State Department has put up a good fight against the Europeans who seek to suppress freedom of the press throughout the world by means of the United Nations. The American position is:

"We are convinced that the fundamental principles of freedom of information can not be the subject of compromise."

The United Nations is, however, a complex and enormous organization in which compromises must be found among 60 nations. Things happen there and the public finds itself faced by a condition from which there is no immediate withdrawal. It is therefore essential that the American position be strengthened to say not that freedom of information can not be the subject of compromise, but we should say that the freedoms of the American people are not subject to discussion. sinuate reputations, a drug to dull the senses, or a poison to instill suspicion and fear.

Of course, when they have sought support for their view in the United Nations, they have been careful to present it in the most disarming disguise. They have maintained that to promote friendly international relations it is first necessary to define what information is and then to suppress the dissemination of anything which does not conform to the definition.

What these countries seek to do in the United States is to make the newspapers and the journalists "responsible." They do not recognize that the laws of libel are sufficient; they demand that, by administrative procedure, a government shall be enabled to take action against a newspaper or a reporter who is not "responsible." By responsibility, they mean that no reporter should write nor should a newspaper print anything that annoys the politicians of any country. Binder says:

8 Chiang Aides Said Executed

HONG KONG, July 16 — Reports reaching Hong Kong from the Chinese mainland said today that eight former Chinese Nationalist commanders had been executed recently in Canton immediately after a public trial.

Among those reportedly executed was Hsu Kuan, former deputy commander of the Nationalist 64th Army.

Death Takes No Vacation, Lawmen Warn

Safety Tips On Highway Given Here

Travelers Told To Check Rules

"If all vacationists would bear in mind that Death in traffic never has two weeks off with pay, then dangerous thoughtlessness might drop to a new low level."

That was the advice offered Monday by local authorities to persons who have not yet taken their vacations. Law officers in both Circleville and Pickaway County emphasized that Death on the highway never takes a vacation.

Here are a few safety tips the lawmen offer local vacationists this Summer:

"When driving in other states, you should discover what the speed limit is, observe all signs, markings and signals. If you are in doubt, ask any police officer or sheriff. He will welcome the opportunity to explain how his state's laws differ from Ohio's code."

"Some states have a lower speed limit at night. In any case, travel slower in the dark. Remember you can not see so far or so well at night, and you have to see a hazard to be able to avoid it."

"WE CAN EXPECT more vehicles on our highways than ever before during July and August. Sometimes there will be more than a given stretch of road can accommodate unless all drivers play fair and are patient when the inevitable delays arise."

"Traffic accidents are seven percent higher right now than in 1950—outside of Ohio. Our rate is still below the 1950 figures, a distinction we may not enjoy much longer because we're creeping closer and closer to the rate of a year ago. Outside drivers will affect our rate some, but the fact is that Ohio drivers are responsible for most of Ohio's accidents."

"Last year there were 320 fatal traffic accidents on Ohio highways during July and August, 217 of which were on rural highways. The open road seems to invite a lot of us to step on it."

"Not all of us exceed the legal speed limit; we exceed the safe right of way at the wrong time, pass improperly or drive on the wrong side of the road. It all adds up to too big a hurry—too much speed."

"One of the greatest indictments against today's driver is his urge to dash like mad to get someplace. This trait is especially evident at vacation time."

"The wise vacationist does not regard the time spent enroute to his destination as wasted. He lets his vacation begin the very

America 'Voice' Pokes Fun At Soviet Chiefs

WASHINGTON, July 16—The State Department's Voice Of America has poked fun at Soviet rulers for their failure to make public the message of friendship for the Russian people sent by President Truman last week. In programs beamed to the Russians, the department's broadcasts derided the Kremlin for keeping secret the resolution voicing U. S. friendship adopted by the House and Senate.

One broadcaster emphasized that the U. S. would do anything it could to help the Russian leaders translate the document from English into Russian.

He conceded that finicky phraseology is a special Soviet science, but suggested it would be simple for Moscow to telephone Washington for any definitions which may puzzle the Kremlin.

For example, he said if the Russians do not understand the use of the American word "friendship," They could use "comradeship."
